The 5-Touch Follow-Up Sequence

The exact messages that revive “dead” leads and book calls — steal them word for word.

FREE GUIDE · NO. 3

Most coaches message a lead once, get no reply, and quit. But people are busy, not uninterested. Deals close on the 5th–7th touch. Here's the sequence — space it over ~10 days, keep it human.

Touch 1 — Day 0 (they show interest)

"Amazing 🙌 quick one so I can actually help — what do you coach, and roughly how many calls are you booking a month right now?"

Touch 2 — Day 2 (no reply)

"Hey [name] — did this get lost? No pressure at all, just didn't want you to miss the free teardown."

Touch 3 — Day 4 (drop value)

"Btw — the #1 leak I see for [their niche] coaches is the link-in-bio maze. Might be worth a 30-sec look at yours 🌀"

Touch 4 — Day 7 (soft scarcity)

"I've got room for a couple of free teardowns this week — want me to hold one for you?"

Touch 5 — Day 10 (close the loop)

"Going to close this off so I'm not clogging your DMs — still keen for the free teardown, or catch you another time? Either's totally cool 🍷"

THE ONE-LINE REVIVAL

For any old lead who ghosted, this five-word message quietly works: "Did this get lost?" — low pressure, human, easy to answer. It revives a shocking number of "dead" conversations.

The rules

- ☐ Space them out — don't machine-gun
- ☐ Add a little value each time, not just "you there?"
- ☐ Always give an easy way to say "not now"
- ☐ Automate it so no lead is ever dropped

Want this done for you?

Want this running automatically for every lead, forever? That's a 30-minute setup for me.

I build the whole system for coaches — the page, the booking, the follow-up — so you just show up to booked calls. And I'll show you exactly where you're leaking clients first, free.

TWO WAYS TO START

1. DM the word “CLIENTS” to @automation_by_abhi on Instagram.
